

High on Demands but Low on Budget?

What is INTAGate and why do I need it?

Leading to exemplary customer experience and an overall more efficient workforce, the demand for call management tools continues to rise, just as companies strive to grow and outstrip competition. For many small to medium businesses, however, the problem lies on the cost of acquiring these tools, as it is quite the investment to have to pay for both a telephone system and the call software appropriate for their business. The good news is, quality software is not exclusively reserved to 5 star hotels and companies with unlimited budgets, as INTAGate provides businesses everything they need to connect with customers, automatically record and create reports for transactions, and build an overall more collaborative work environment.

Complete with its own telephone system, INTAGate provides the tools that any company needs in order to deliver outstanding service. Normally, this becomes costly for companies as having to purchase their needed software separately from their telephone systems does require quite an investment. With INTAGate, companies do not need to purchase both telephone systems and call software as it offers both and the tools are made available as an integral part of the company's system.

The best part is, it is affordable! A tool that has traditionally only been made available to large companies, INTAGate extends its reach to any business, big or small, through being price-sensitive – being up to 4x less costly than that of Panasonic. Improved work efficiency through assured cost-efficiency – the right tools are right at your fingertips!
